OFFICIAL BALLOT

ONE VOTE

FOR

In the Kentuckian's Most Popular Lady Contest Aug. 29, to Dec. 29, 1902.

A SOUTHERN ORATOR.

Dr. Briggs Equal to the Men of Earlier Days.

Dr. Geo. W. Briggs, who lectures at Holland's Opera House next Thursday night, October 9, has achieved a most pronounced success. He is a star of the first magnitude and his powers are pre-eminent over the great number who lecture with success. His oratory is of the lofty and dignified style. Read the following extracts:

"Dr. George Waverley Briggs made a profound success, and ranks with Wendings, Conwell, Nourse, and such men, who are fixtures on the platform."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"His audience laughs as earnestly, at one moment as they at another weep in sympathy at one of those strokes which make the whole world kin. His powers of portrayal are rare indeed, and his audience see with him the scenes his fancy pictures."—Middletown (O.) Signal.

Dr. Briggs lectures under the exclusive management of the Interstate Lecture Bureau.

Clothers

Who would keep their children in good health, should watch for the first symptoms of worms, and remove them with White's Cream Vermifuge. It is the children's best tonic. It gets digestion at work so that their food does them good, and they grow up healthy and strong. 25c at R. C. Hardwick's.

HARDWARE HOUSE.

Will Be Opened By a Big Stock Company.

More Than A Hundred Farmers and Capitalists Are Interested.

The Farmers Hardware company will be incorporated within the next few days with a capital stock of $30,000.

There are 105 stockholders, including many of the most prominent farmers in the county.

Among these are J. R. Caudle & Son, R. F. Rives & Sons, P. B. Pendleton, G. H. Stowe, R. T. Stowe, E. M. Jones, E. K. Jones, E. D. Jones, W. S. Cheatham, M. A. Mason, J. M. Adams, W. H. Adams, G. R. Pierce, Mc. J. Davis, Cayce Bros., W. T. Fowler, W. S. Harned and others.

The definite plans have not yet been agreed upon, but it is expected that Mr. W. S. Harned will be general manager and Mr. C. S. Jackson head book-keeper of the company, whose place of business is likely to be either in the Cooper building on the Garnett building.

The company expects to handle everything in the hardware and implement line, from a threshing machine to a box of tacks.

The new enterprise will be backed by men of unlimited means and will aim to do business on a large scale.

The directors are R. F. Rives, President; G. H. Stowe, Secretary; C. F. Jarrett, J. F. Garnett, W. H. Adams, J. R. Caudle and E. D. Jones.

RESIGNED PASTORATE.

Rev. Hall of Tennessee Church Will Remove To Dallas, Texas.

Rev. Milton Hall, formerly of this county, has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist Church at Dickson, Tenn. He will begin a meeting at Little West Fork Church near New Providence, Tenn., Oct. 12, and will be assisted by Dr. A. S. Pettie, of Columbus, Tenn.

It is the intention of Rev. Hall to go to Dallas, Texas, about the first of November.

CONDUCTORS CLOSE CALL.

Fell From Box Car and Was Badly Injured.

Sam Ingram, an L. & N. freight conductor, fell from the top of a box car in the yards here about noon yesterday and was badly hurt. His head struck a car going opposite from him and his scalp was laid bare for several inches.

He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the residence of Harry Brame, where surgical aid was rendered by Drs. Jackson and Eager. It is thought he will recover.

FRIGHTFUL FALL

Of Trapeze Performer at the Guthrie Fair.

During the performance of Red Joe, one of the revolving trapeze performers at the Guthrie fair Friday, a serious accident happened. The young man was in the act of sliding down a rope with the intention of catching on a ladder with his toes, when his feet slipped, and he fell to the ground below, a distance of about twelve feet, hitting on his head and shoulders, splitting his face open and bruising him in a serious but not fatal manner.

He had a similar fall the first day of the fair and had not fully recovered from the effects of that accident.

Mrs. Robt. M. Steele.

Mrs. Josie Steele, wife of Mr. Robt. M. Steele, died about noon Sunday at her home on East Fourteenth Street, after a brief illness. She was a member of the Ninth St. Presbyterian church and a woman held in the highest esteem by all who knew her. She is survived by husband and several children, the youngest being an infant.

Dr. W. L. Nourse conducted services at the church Monday and the interment took place in Hopewell Cemetery.

OVER 100

People Indicted by Grand Jury at This Term.

Body Adjourned Friday—Several Verdicts Returned in Common Law Cases.

The grand jury adjourned Friday afternoon. More than 100 persons were indicted during the term. Only 80 bills were found but in some case several parties were jointly indicted in one bill. The following indictments were returned today:

Carrying concealed deadly weapons, 9; petit larceny, 1; selling liquor on Sunday, 3; selling liquor without license, 14; selling liquor to minors, 3; selling liquor to inebriates, 4; gaming, 4; fornication, 1; maintaining common nuisance, 1; breach of the peace, 5; indecent exposure, 1; keeping bawdy house, 5; shooting on public highway, 2; permitting gaming, 1; keeping disorderly house, 2.

Common Law Matters.

The jury in the case of Elijah Daniel, col., against the Continental Fire Insurance company, returned a verdict for plaintiff for $250, the full amount sued for. Daniel's house was destroyed by fire about a year ago. The company claimed that they had notified him of the cancellation of the policy on same, but plaintiff stated that he had never surrendered the policy.

Sarah Malone held two policies of $500 each in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. She sued for the amounts and the cases were tried together. Verdict for plaintiff in each case.

Mary F. Chester was granted a divorce from W. W. W. Chester.

The Malinda Dickinson will case is now on trial. Several jail cases will likely be tried this week.

SCORE A TIE.

Feature of Game Was Team Work of Hopkinsville.

The Paducah News-Democrat gives the following account of the foot ball game in that city Friday between Hopkinsville and Paducah: Nearly 200 wet but happy rooters waded from the car line to the grand stand at the West End fair grounds to see the struggle on the grid-iron between the foot ball teams of Hopkinsville and Paducah Friday afternoon.

As it had been raining in torrents for eighteen hours, the field was a perfect mud puddle and fast work was impossible, but the boys slipped and splashed through the mire, looking like so many mud figures.

It was a great game and ended in a tie—5 to 5. The feature of the game was the team work of the visitors, and the clean playing of both teams. There was little or no wrangling.

Play was called promptly at 4 o'clock, and after much hard work and several well-earned gains, Young, playing left half for the visitors, scored the first touch down.

After that the ball was kept near the center of the field during the first half. In the second half, after several good runs and slides, Capt. Rudy, playing left end for the locals, made a 20-yard run for a touch down, tying the score.

Neither side was able to score after this and time was called with the pig skin in Paducah's territory. At some future date, not yet settled, the Paducah boys will go to Hopkinsville for a return game.

The Hopkinsville boys were accompanied by a good-sized crowd of rooters, who returned home with the team at 1 o'clock this morning. James Ray, of this city, was referee, and Wallace Kelly, of Hopkinsville, was umpire. They gave good satisfaction.

G. A. Roberts of Dintner, Ill., suffered four years with a wad in his stomach and could not eat. He lost 65 pounds. Two bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his appetite, cured his stomach trouble and today he is well and hearty end says he owes his health to Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. All druggists.

CADIZ CONFLAGRATION.

County Seat of Trigg Suffers by Another Fire.

Last Thursday morning about 4 o'clock the livery stable of Fraser & Thacker and the dwelling of K. R. McKee at Cadiz were destroyed by fire. The fire originated in the stable, which was in full blaze when discovered. The entire contents of the stable was destroyed, including office fixtures, harness and saddlery shop, eight head of horses, a number of vehicles and a lot of feed stuff.

In the stable were buggies belonging to Judge Wallace Hancock and Messrs. Alfred Cunningham, Smith Thomas and Dr. E. B. Bradshaw. All of them were also burned.

A. F. Fraser's loss is about $1,200; insured for $55. McKee's loss, about $3,000; insured for $1,300. Liveryman Cook, of Pembroke, lost two valuable horses and a buggy. Mr. Thacker's loss is total, as he had no insurance on his part of the property, we understand.

CASE REVERSED.

Court Of Appeals Sets Aside Judgment Against Illinois Central.

The Court of Appeals, in the case of the I. C. R. R. vs Lalage from Muhlenburg county held that it was not the duty of a railroad to provide an inn for passengers, but to provide a waiting room and have it open 30 minutes before train time. Lalage and his wife went to the station at Central City five hours before train time and while waiting a gang of drunken men came in and assaulted and robbed Lalage. He recovered $2300 damages which the Court below reversed.

ROPE OF RIBBON

Used by Asylum Patient in Committing Suicide.

Mrs. Susan Wolfe, an inmate of Western Asylum, committed suicide by hanging Sunday afternoon. She made a rope of ribbon and attached one end to the wire over the door in her room. She had been allowed to take a nap after dinner and had only been in the room a short while. When she was found life was extinct.

MISS CARRIE KING

Married Yesterday Afternoon to a Virginian.

Miss Carrie King, only daughter of Esq. M. B. King, was married yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Mr. Ashton Doyle, of Petersburg, Va. The ceremony was pronounced by Rev. W. F. Carshman. Mr. and Mrs. Doyle left on the 5:23 train for Nashville and from there will leave in a few days for Virginia.

LAI D TO REST.

Body of Gallant Naval Officer Buried Sunday.

Funeral Services of Lieutenant Bronaugh Held by Rev. C. H. Nash.

The remains of Lieut. Commander Wm. V. Bronaugh arrived from New York Saturday night and the funeral occurred at 9:30 Sunday morning, from the residence of Mr. Jno. T. Edmunds.

A song was sung by Misses Nell Donaldson and Julia Arnold and Messrs. J. M. Starling and Bailey Waller, after which Rev. C. H. Nash read a chapter and made a few remarks and held a prayer service.

The pall bearers were Messrs. J. B. Dade, J. B. Trice, J. O. Cook, G. H. Champlain, Geo. V. Green, H. M. Bryan, Col. Jouett Henry and Dr. H. H. Wallace.

CRUSHED BY CARS.

Harry Edwards Meets Horrible Death in Florida.

Harry Edwards, the 17-year-old son of C. E. Edwards, of Florida, formerly of Pee Dee, this county, was killed by the cars a few days ago. He was standing between two box cars watching a game of ball, when an engine backed up, and the young man was knocked down and run over. Death resulted in a few minutes.

He moved with his father to Florida several years ago.

THE OLD COUPLE.

Over the soft young grass
I saw the old couple pass.
Slowly they walked and stood
Close to the budding wood.
Surely it seemed they were stung
By the thought of how fair and young
The whole earth looked beside
A gray old bridegroom and bride.
Not for the flowering mold
Beneath them was centuries old;
The skies that smiled above
Were old as Eden and love;
And of all the forest trees
In the woodland families,
The oldest were most fair
And wore the happiest air.
The aged stars in the blue
In the beauty of spring were new,
And the aged hearts in the wood
By the spirit of spring were renewed.

A BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

AGNES LOUISE PROVOST.

They stood coldly silent, he with a dull flush of anger on his face, she with an unbending pride showing in the lift of her head. It had been a bitter quarrel, and now this awkward, pause had fallen upon them. There was a little table between them, and on it wore the circlet she had worn for him, crowned with the clear white fire of a diamond.

"Take it," she said, coldly, indicating the ring with a slight movement of her hand, as she broke the silence of a full minute which had seemed like ten. He turned away obstinately.

"It is nothing whatever to me now. You may do as you please with it. Give it away."

It was childish and rude, and he knew it, but Holcombe was not of a yielding nature.

"I believe I need not trouble you longer," he added, stiffly. "Of course, this will make some infernally unpleasant comment, but the only thing is to have it known as soon as possible. Good afternoon."

He bowed himself out formally he who had been used to linger with so much of pleasant and tender nonsense, and she inclined her head in cold acknowledgment.

Then the outer door closed and the tension relaxed. Sinking wearily into a chair near the table, Charlotte dropped her head on her arms, so that the shining circlet came within her embrace and pressed sharply into her cheek. Then the tears came, at first with slow bitterness, and then harder until the bowed shoulders shook.

The next morning Richard Holcomb received a registered package in his mail. It was a tiny package, and he did not need the familiar handwriting to tell him what it was. Without opening it, he held the little thing in a crushing grip in his hand, and sat motionless for many minutes, staring morosely at the floor.

The late afternoon train sped northward through the gathering twilight, and Charlotte, leaning back listlessly in her chair, looked out at the swiftly sliding landscape until the outer dimness and the lights of the train left only a blankness beyond the windows, and the reflection of bored fellow-passengers across the aisle. It jarred on her present mood to be thus shut in with strangers, but it was better to be getting somewhere than to remain idly at home.

This was the day she was to have been married. To be sure, that was long ago, and the past was buried, but the memory of many little things had bred a mood of impatient restlessness which had started her off late in the afternoon—a foolish thing—on a long-deferred visit to a friend. It was a four hours' journey, with only a telegram to herald her arrival at ten in the evening, unattended, but this was a friend who would understand and say nothing.

It seemed a long while back, much more than two months, since that afternoon when so many hard and cruel words had been said, and she had sent the little ring back to Richard Holcomb. He had studiously avoided her since, and she had met the world's curious eyes with calm indifference, going her way as usual. How people had whispered, and conjectured and surmised, when it was known that their engagement was broken! What a delicious morsel it had been to some of them! Charlotte had put it behind her with a firm hand, and even her nearest friend had wondered if she ever could have cared.

A man came down the aisle from another car, filling up the narrow space with his big height and breadth. Charlotte saw his reflection in the mirrors at the other end, and colored faintly. Then she turned away, and let her eyes wander in a composed contemplation of her fellow-passengers.

"Hello, Dick! Where did you come from, old man?"

A man near her had called to him in hearty welcome, as men always welcomed Dick. Holcombe paused and gave a good-natured account of himself.

"I came from the smoker. Present destination, the sleeper about three cars on, to find my mother and get some dinner. We have the nuisance of a night's journey ahead of us. Come on and we'll all dine together."

The man arose and went with him, and as Holcombe turned he caught sight of Charlotte, and started slightly. Reluctantly enough she raised her eyes and bowed, and he returned it formally and passed out. For the merest fraction of a second, he seemed to hesitate, but now he was gone.

His mother! A tinge of the old bitterness came back to Charlotte. His mother had not accepted her as a prospective daughter-in-law without a struggle. She was a proud and stately old lady, and had centered all her wishes on a brilliant marriage for Dick, whereas Charlotte, with all her fair face and a name no less honorable than his own, could bring him nothing of worldly advancement or influence. It had been Mrs. Holcombe's attitude, which the world knew as well as she, that had made that bitter quarrel possible, and had hardened Charlotte's hurt pride into a thing of steel and ice.

It was foolish to think of those things now. They were past, far past. Charlotte turned back to her listless contemplation of the window and its reflections. She had seen Dick but once before since that day. He seemed a little thin, too—

Out of darkness there came a deafening roar, a resistless shock which hurled strong men from their seats like toys, and the grinding crash of splintering wood, and iron on iron. On the heels of this a second dizzy jerk, a second bruising crash, and the car lurched again and pitched heavily over on its side.

When her dazed senses came back to her, Charlotte lay huddled, bruised, and terrified in a corner of the overturned car. Fearful noises were in her ears, the shrieks of women and the hoarse shouts of men, cruelly hurt or imprisoned under heavy weights. The sound of splintering glass was close to her, and on trembling hands and knees she crept up the slanting floor to where a man, groaning under his breath with the pain of a broken ankle, was using his heavy dress-suit case as a battering ram against a window.

"It will come in a minute," he called, encouragingly, smashing at the framework and the sharp corners of glass as he saw her white face near him. "I'll get you through. There!"

The stranger was thin and wiry, and he worked his head and shoulders through and pulled himself slowly out, drawing his breath sharply as the broken ankle twinged again. Then he reached in for her. It was not a large opening, and the little bits of glass caught and tore her clothing, but he pulled her safely through and Charlotte gasped in breathless thankfulness as she reached the cool evening air.

"Oh, curse this ankle! Look at that!" The man groaned at his own impotence to aid. "What can a lame man do against that, and with all the poor wretches pinned under these timbers."

Charlotte pressed her hands to her temples as she followed the direction of his eyes. A creeping tongue of flame had shot up from the far end of car she had left, and the cries of the prisoner broke out with renewed intensity. She looked at the stranger with a new horror in her eyes.

"Dick?" she whispered. "Where is he? Suppose—"

She arose dizzily and ran with little stumbling steps picking her way over the scattered debris. The wrecked cars lay in terrible confusion around her, and ahead were two telescoped engines, scarcely more than scrap iron now. And nearer her, more flames, a creeping, insidious horror, greedily lapping at the splintered wood and crawling nearer, always nearer. Above it all, the heart-rending babel of cries.

Men ran past her in the darkness, shouting orders in the confusion, women wrung their hands and sobbed hysterically, but she heeded no one.

One, two, three. He had said it was the third car. Charlotte ran along it from end to end her nervous fingers gripped against her throat, as though to force down the horrible choking lump there. It was a ruin, worse than a ruin. It was from here that the creeping flames came—his car!

A woman rescued by brave hands sat on the ground just struggling back to consciousness. Charlotte dropped on her knees beside her and looked closely into her face.

"Where is Dick?" she demanded, sharply. "Where is he?"

Mrs. Holcombe took the girl's hands in a convulsive grasp.

"Isn't he here?" she asked, wildly. "I do not know. This is the first I have known anything. Charlotte, he cannot be in there! Oh, Dick, my boy, my boy!"

Still on her knees, Charlotte leaned forward and peered with a dreadful fascination at the burning car. From one end of it a woman's hand and arm stuck rigidly up from the wreckage, the body crushed and lost to sight beneath heavy timbers and iron. The flickering light played on it, showing chaos behind and around.

"Charlotte!" Mrs. Holcombe pressed the girl close to her, so that her fine gray hair lay against Charlotte's brown locks. She was quivering violently, this stately old lady who seemed ever to live in an unruffled calm. Once I was unkind to you. God is punishing me for that. Charlotte forgave me, and help me find my boy!"

"He isn't in there! He can't be in there!" Charlotte clung to her for a moment, and broke away to run up and down the length of the car again, peering into every crack and space. She even crept cautiously over the wreckage, shuddering at the sound of faint groans beneath, until the heat of the flames at the far end drove her back again, frantic with apprehension.

A half-insane idea came to her that the man who had helped her out could find him. He was hurt, but he had known how to save himself and her; surely he would help find Dick. She flew back toward the car she had left, peering into the faces of the excited men who were tearing at the wreckage to rescue those beneath. She noticed vaguely that the flames had made great headway on that car since she had left it. There was only a quarter of its length now where men could work, and the number of rescuers was pitifully small in comparison with those who moaned and shrieked for help.

Through the half darkness Charlotte stumbled on sobbing now as she looked into face after face and failed to find the stranger who had helped her through.

At the end of the burning car a big man worked like a demon grasping hot timbers with his bare hands and prying up great weights with the strength of men and angels. There were two men helping him and now and then they shot a look of wondering pity at his face. His hands were black with soot and bleeding, his clothes were torn, and in the yellow lights of the flames his face showed haggard and set. Some poor creature below, hot with the approaching fire and half-crushed, cried out with renewed vigor as blessed relief came so near. The big man bent over the opening his own hands had made.

"Charlotte!" he called, anxiously. "Charlotte!"

"Oh, Dick!" Not from the horror beneath, but from the good, firm ground beside him, Charlotte's fingers clutched at his arm. The other men looked at each other and turned their heads, as they bent down and carefully lifted a half dead woman from the horror which had hemmed her in.

Charlotte did not see them. Her face was buried in Dick's shoulder, and he held her close to him, regardless of his lacerated hands.

"I thought you were in there," he whispered, huskily, "in that burning car. I got my mother out unhurt, but before she came to herself I saw the fire here, and I laid her in a safe place and came down for you. Charlotte, dear little girl!"

A few moments later a half-crazed woman, kneeling beside the wreckage with disordered gray hair and straining eyes, saw these two coming swiftly toward her.

"My son!" she cried, eagerly, sobbing for gladness, and as he lifted her she put one hand blindly toward Charlotte. "My daughter!"—Housekeeper, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Breaking Strain.

The stoutest cable ever made is strained to the breaking point when it is overtaxed. Just the amount of strain the cable will bear without breaking can be figured by the makers to an ounce. The human body is like the chain in this that it breaks down when more than a legitimate strain is put upon it. But, unlike the chain, there is no means of telling under what strain the physical powers will collapse. For that reason the first symptoms of being overtaxed are alarming. If there is a feeling of weakness, especially when accompanied by loss of flesh, the strain on the body is passing beyond its endurance. There is need of increased physical strength and vigor.

People who are weak and run-down will find that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will promptly restore them to vigorous health. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound flesh.

"I had been sick for two years with indigestion and nervous debility, and had taken medicine from my family doctor for a long time without much benefit," writes Mrs. W. H. Peckles, of Lucknow, S. C. "Was induced by my husband to consult Dr. Pierce by letter. You advised me to take 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription,' which I did, and, to my great surprise, after taking six bottles I was cured. My husband has not paid one cent in doctors' bills for me since. I took the medicine nearly two years ago."

A Rice Farm in Texas

Is better than a gold mine and it don't take much money to own one. They can also be rented reasonably. Rice pays better than any other crop grown in America and requires only the same cultivation as wheat, using the same machinery. On October 21st there will be a Big Cheap excursion to Texas via the I. C. and Southern Pacific railroads and all who are interested had better go out and look over the ground as well as take a most enjoyable trip. There will be entertainment offered the excursionists at all points. For further information as to time, rates, etc., and to prices and locations of rice farms write to

LOVE'S PROOF.

How can I prove my love to you,
You whom I love so well?
What can I say, what can I do,
All doubts henceforth to quell?
No vows I make, vows are too weak,
In them no proof would lie;
Some other method I must seek
My heart to satisfy.
Nor can I shille on you alone,
As through the world we go;
Some other method must be known
To those who love would show.
No, dear, I'll simply take your hand;
My life time to your own;
As on we go, o'er rocks, through sand,
With ne'er a sigh or moan.
We'll happy be when smiles the sun,
And laugh when falls the rain;
Making each day the only one,
Filled with its joy or pain.
No promises for future years,
No memories of past;
No shedding of regretful tears,
No coming hopes forecast;
A present hope, a present joy,
My love must be to you;
A hoop of gold without alloy,
That makes us strong and true.
A circle, where each life complete
Within its lines may dwell;
Invisible, and yet so sweet,
Each knows and feels the spell.
More tangible this proof will be
Than word, or look, or deed;
A something that no man can see,
It satisfied our need.
—Minnie Meserve Soule, in Boston Budget.

Worth Waiting For

By INA LEON CASSILIS.

"I SEE How it is," the man said, bitterly. "Duty is such an easy catchword. If you love me, you couldn't give me up so calmly; but you don't love me—that's it!"

The girl stood with her head drooping, the burning tears dropping down her face and onto her clasped hands. She lifted her eyes for a moment to the handsome, angry face, seen dimly through a mist of tears.

"Love isn't everything," she said. "Duty comes first!"

"Duty! Is it duty? It's only natural for sons and daughters to marry and leave their first home."

Lillian Grey's fair face flushed. "You are not putting it fairly, Arthur. It is not natural—at any rate it is not right—for an only daughter to leave a father who needs her, who cannot do without her."

"If that's all," said Arthur Morton, "let him live with us."

"No, that will not do. You, as my husband, would claim my first attention, and what ever you might do at first, you would by-and-by exact it."

"And you say you love me!" said the young man, with angry sarcasm. "Far more," she answered, quietly. "than you love me."

"You've an odd way of showing it," he said. "Your father himself would not wish you to make such a sacrifice."

"Because he is selfish; but my first duty is to him, and I must do it, whether I suffer or not—whether you suffer or not. There are other things to live for but happiness; I could not, besides, be happy, if I left my father in his old age and his loneliness."

"He may live for years; and your youth be wasted—"

"Wasted!" interrupted Lillian, with flashing eyes. "You seem to have no god but self. It's not my happiness you are thinking of, but your own."

"Oh! very well," was the passionate retort; "if you only want an excuse to break with me—one is as good as another. I like a little more of heart and a little less of rigid sense of duty. Good-by!"

Without a word more he turned from her and strode away down the field path. He was in a white heat of passion. Lillian looked after him in a sort of agony; then sank down on the meadow grass, covering her face and sobbing. But her bitterest grief was for the disillusionment of those moments; the keen sense of disappointment stabbed her like a knife.

The man to whom she had given her heart had flashed out in his true colors, and shown himself selfish, exacting, even unfeeling, save for his own happiness. Hard though the parting was, the girl felt that it was better so, better that the test had to be put, for it proved the metal of the man's character. She rose up after awhile, and walked slowly back to the pretty cottage where she and her gray-haired father lived. It was not until two or three days had passed that she told the old man what had happened, and that she had sent Arthur Morton away. He was grieved. "My child," he said, "you should not—you have your life to live—mine is almost over." But she knelt by him and took his hand in both her own. "Father," she said, "you must never speak to me like that again. You are always first with me."

"Well, dear," he said, tenderly, "perhaps it will not be very long." But three years passed, and he still lived.

It was not to Arthur Morton that Lillian spoke; "but to a man older, graver, with a deep bronze on his cheek, and a steady light in his keen gray eyes."

"But, if you love me?" he said, taking her hand in his. "Yes," she answered, softly. "I love you—but my duty comes first." "I know it, Lillian. Am I not a soldier? But if I am content to wait?" "Ah! no. I must not let you do that! It may be years—"

"I would serve for you, Lillian, as Jacob served for Rachel. I must wait, for I love you. Do you think?"—and now he drew her within his arms—"that I would lose the woman who steadfastly puts love and happiness away from her that she may do right?"

How different this love from Arthur Morton's! Lillian yielded, and Bertram Langdon waited—waited two years, and then Lillian's father died.

"Why, Langdon, it's years since we met! How is the world going with you?"

Arthur Morton was prosperous, but perhaps not quite contented; for the wife he had married was not like Lillian.

"I have no quarrel with the world just now," returned Col. Langdon, smiling. "Are you single, Morton?"

"No—" a shade on the speaker's brow. "I am married; and you?"

"A month-old husband; I waited for my wife two years."

"You constant fellow! But why?"

"Because my wife would not leave her father even for my sake. Such a woman is worth waiting for."

"What's her name, Langdon?" asked Arthur, in a changed tone.

"Lillian Gray."

Arthur nodded. "Well," he said, after a pause. "I congratulate you."

But when he was alone again he sighed—sighed more than once. Perhaps, after all, he had made a great mistake; perhaps, after all, "such a woman was worth waiting for."—American Queen.

CRAB RACING AS A SPORT.

New and Popular Diversion of the Fashionable Frequenters of Eastern Seaside Resorts.

Crab-racing is not like Mark Twain's jumping frog game and it is not exactly like racing beetles off hot plates, but it suggests both those time-honored games. The crab race, however, is a new thing in sporting annals, and is said to be an English importation brought over from the English watering places by a young college student, reports an eastern exchange.

In this form of sport each of the contestants gets a crab to begin with and holds it "on the mark." The start is made at a place not far from the water, and when released the crab seeks its natural element. The person whose crab first passes under the wire which is stretched parallel with and close to the water wins the game and bet.

Some member of the party with a long net stands near the shore, so that as soon as a particularly fast crab gets into the water it can be scooped in and brought back for a start in a race for the fleetest. The crabs go in all sorts of zigzags to the finish line.

A college youth who was at Glen Island recently with his mother and sweetheart suggested the sport. A Boston woman was rather suspicious of the game, fearing that it would not be held to be strictly good form according to Back Bay and Commonwealth avenue standards, but she was soon convinced of its propriety by a Brooklyn curate, who said there could be nothing fast about a crab.

A committee of three was appointed to obtain the crabs. After an hour's work some three dozen crabs were obtained and the track was made ready for the race.

Each maid, matron and man selected a crab, and this in itself was merry sport. Trial races were run off first, and the crabs that proved to be selling platters were allowed to escape into the water.

Finally, after the animals had been well tried out, each contestant obtained a satisfactory crab and a book was started on the result of the races. Everything but money was wagered—gloves, candy, cigars, ribbons, dinners, soda water, ice cream or anything else that suggested itself to the ingenious sporting fraternity.

Much amusement was caused when the crabs began to elbow each other in the race. As in other races, this was apt to lead to a fight, and the crabs clinched and allowed themselves to be distanced. Water seemed to be the one thing that would cause the struggling crabs to break away, and it was voted that any crabs that stopped to fight should be flooded with a bucket of water.

The course was a 12-foot straightaway dash—that is, it was for the crabs who seemed to understand the game. Others that took a circuitous route to the shore were ruled off the track after one or two trials and more intelligent runners substituted.

This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town. Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale C. K. Wyly.

In Memoriam.

Jack T. Carter was born near Pee Dee, October 23rd, 1868, and died at his home in Bennetts town, July 26, 1902. He was the son of Thos. and Susan Carter.

In his death the family sustained an irreparable loss an only son and the support and comfort of an aged mother. Three sisters survive him, two of whom are married.

He was only sick about ten days. God certainly moves in a mysterious way and we can only bow our heads and say—"Thy will be done."

To his mother and sisters we would say—"That earth hath no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal," and ever look to Jesus for comfort and consolation in your dark hours.

Mr. Carter was highly respected by all who knew him and was honorable and just in all of his dealings. We never heard any one speak unkindly of him. But God knows best and why he was taken will never be explained in this world. Remember Jesus said, "What I do thou knowest not now but thou shalt know hereafter." So trust in the One who doeth all things well and He will lead and judge you safely into that Home prepared above, where sorrow and death are not known and where the kind and gentle Saviour has prepared a resting place for you. A FRIEND.

"It Goes Right to the Spot."

When pain or irritation exists on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment will give prompt relief. "It goes right to the spot," said an old man who was rubbing it in, to cure his rheumatism. C. R. Smith, propr. Smith House, Tanaha, Texas, writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment in my family for several years and have found it to be a fine remedy, for all aches and pains, and I recommend it for pains in the throat and chest." 25c at R. S. Hardwick's.

LITERARY TREAT.

Was Last Meeting of Athenaeum Friday Night.

The Athenaeum held its regular monthly meeting at Hotel Latham Thursday night, with 18 of the 26 members present.

Judge J. T. Hanberry read a very interesting paper on "The Law," which was discussed by a number of the members in a manner that proved profitable to all present.

Mr. H. H. Abernathy's paper on "The Smart Set" was a severe arraignment of the aristocracy that has been of late receiving some attention from the editor of the Courier Journal. Mr. Abernathy demonstrated his ability to prepare and present a most acceptable paper.

Dr. Edmund Harrison's thesis on "The Integrity of the Home, The Stability of the Government" dealt with the divorce problem and handled it in a most learned and exhaustive manner. For depth of thought and moral excellence the paper was regarded by some as the best so far heard.

Messrs. W. T. Tandy, J. W. Downer and Frank Rives are on the program for the next meeting. Col. Jouett Henry was elected to membership in the Club. Those present were: William H. Harrison, Jno. Stites, Gordon Nelson, J. T. Hanberry, T. W. Blakey, Edmund Harrison, Ira Smith, Manning Brown, Frank Rives, Chas. M. Meacham, Geo. E. Gary, H. H. Abernathy, J. C. Duffy, W. T. Tandy, J. W. Downer, Jas. F. Burns, H. L. McPherson, T. C. Underwood.

Of Interest to Women.

Women who have themselves suffered from the evil effects of constipation and indigestion will be interested in the following letter from a father whose daughter was given up to die by two physicians:

"My daughter has suffered from indigestion for the past five years and has tried nearly everything that she could hear of for such trouble. She was confined to her bed when she began taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and after taking one 50 cent bottle she is able to walk a mile at a time and during the day yesterday walked 3 1/2 miles. I feel like praising Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin because two doctors told me my daughter could not get well and I feel that she is on a fair road to permanent relief.—Respectfully, J. H. M. Crocker, Nixon, Tenn., Aug. 6, 1900.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in fifty cent and $1.00 bottles, under a positive guarantee, by all druggists.

HON. J. K. HENDRICK

Opens His Campaign For Governor Here.

Addressed a Big Crowd at Court House and Made Fine Impression.

Hon. J. K. Hendrick filled his appointment here yesterday, addressing a crowd that filled the court house.

Mr. Hendrick, after announcing his candidacy for Governor, subject to the action of the Democratic party, spoke vigorously against machine politics.

In speaking of the re-organization of the party, he said it was not re-organization which was needed, but organization. That the Democrats had but to cease to quarrel among themselves, and get together and go to work for the good of the country; that the party never had a greater opportunity than that which now confronts it.

He referred to the constant boasting of the Republicans of the prosperous times, but denied that that party had ever done anything to produce prosperous or better times; but said that all the prosperity, or seeming prosperity which we seem to enjoy, are attributable to the great armies of the different countries, which have been taken from the producing classes and made consumers, all of whom had to be fed, clothed and paid. He said that the war between the United States and Spain, the war between Spain and Cuba, the war between Great Britain and the South African Republics, the war between the United States and the Philippines, together with the vast armies which all the civilized powers had been compelled to send to China to protect their subjects and other interests from the vengeance of the Boxers, had all combined to make money plentiful and times better. But he denied that the Republican party had anything to do with this combination of circumstances, which had brought this seeming relief from the stringent times. He said that he did not feel like boasting of good times which were based upon war; that war meant bloodshed and death, and widows and orphans, and an increase of pensions and the public debt, and such prosperity would in time rise up and rebuke those who have thus boasted, and they would finally discover that that which had been referred to as prosperity was in the long run only an accumulation of calamities.

He discussed the tariff at considerable length, claiming that it was reasonable for three-fourths of all the trusts that now so seriously threaten the business of the country and welfare of the people generally, and said that the other one-fourth was based either on patent rights or franchises, and that the chief remedy which could now be applied was a modification of the tariff duties.

He referred to the Ship-subsidy Bill, passed by the last Senate, whereby $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 are to be paid out annually to the owners of the subsidized vessels, simply as a pretext and excuse of the leaders of the Republican party for continuing the high protective tariff, the object being to create so many moneyed obligations for the government to meet, that a resort to high tariff will be inevitable, and said that the bill, or a similar one, would become a law as soon as the pending election was over, if the Republicans were successful. On imperialism he said:

"The press for the last two years has been replete with discussions of imperialism. Imperialism, as I understand it, means the principle or spirit of empire; and when referred to in that sense, of course I am opposed to imperialism. I do not mean by that that the United States government should have abandoned the Philippine Islands, but I do believe that it would have been infinitely better for the people of the Philippines, as well as for the people of the United States, if we had assured them at the outset that a Republican form of government would be established there, and that the United States would assist the people of those islands just as it has Cuba, with the problem of self government until they had attained to such knowledge as would enable them to govern themselves, and then withdraw from the islands. I believe it is practically impossible to make American citizens of the Filipinos. The Creator of the different races of men made one race to occupy one position and another race to occupy another position, and I do not believe it possible to successfully subvert the laws of nature. To my mind, it would be a very difficult undertaking to make a bull dog out of a rabbit, or a greyhound out of a terrapin; but we must perform as difficult feats as these before we can convert the Filipinos into American statesmen, scholars and orators. The very fact that they have inhabited the tropics for centuries, and yet have built no railroads, erected no colleges, organized no banks, nor advanced in material prosperity to any appreciable degree is, at least, a strong suggestion that they are not overburdened with progressiveness. I believe they were intended by the Creator to inhabit a tropical climate, and like most tropical people, to be indolent and thriftless, and thus they will continue, in my opinion, so long as time shall last; and any people transplanted to that climate will in the course of time become like the present population.

"But the objectionable feature of imperialism, as I see it, is the holding of this acquired territory by a republic as conquered provinces. I think it inconsistent with the very idea of a Republican form of government, to hold provinces under subjection with the power of taxation over them, without granting the right of representation. The Revolutionary War was brought on by that very evil, and was fought by the colonists for the purpose of resisting a similar tyranny. The idea that the Constitution does not follow the flag, when that flag floats over American territory, is indeed a novel one, and one which must sooner or later, if persisted in, bring disaster to this republic. We have planted the American flag on the Porto Rican Islands, have appointed officers over them, and have assumed the government of that territory, and yet through the high protective tariff, tax those people for the privilege of shipping their products to our markets to be sold to and consumed by our people. It would not be more inconsistent if we should pass a law taxing the products of New Mexico and Arizona before admitting them to sale in the States."

He spoke of the labor organizations, and said that they had come to stay, and we might as well realize it first as last—that labor had been forced to organize to protect itself against organized capital and the oppression of the tariff-protected baron. He said that there ought to be a law passed by the legislature of Kentucky whereby labor troubles could be arbitrated and settled with justice and fairness to all interested, and if elected he would recommend the passage of such a law to the legislature, and that he would also recommend the passage of a law against trusts, and that he believed one of the surest and most speedy remedies to suppress them would be the passage of a law by every state in the Union against them.

Regarding his own race he said:

"I am not able to tell you at this time who will be my opponents, Judge Black, of Barbourville, is spoken of, but I believe he has never officially announced. He is a good Democrat and an excellent gentleman, and should he announce for the position, will not only be a strong candidate, but, if elected, would in my opinion, make a most excellent Governor. Judge Breckinridge, of Danville, late Attorney General of the state, has also been spoken of as a candidate, but I have never had the pleasure of a conference with him, and am not able to state whether he will be a candidate or not. Mr. Watterson, of Louisville, and Mr. E. H. Taylor, of Frankfort, have, as you have doubtless noticed from the press, declined to enter the race. Mr. Beckham, the present Governor, has also been mentioned as a probable candidate. I do not believe that Mr. Beckham will be a candidate, and I will tell you why I do not believe it. I do not think he is eligible under the Constitution, and I am at a loss to know how any one can think him eligible, who can read and interpret language. When Gov. Beckham was a candidate before, I was heartily for him, and did what I could in an humble way to secure his election, and was glad that he was elected. But I do not believe that Governor Beckham is the only Democrat in the State of Kentucky who is competent to discharge the duties of the office of Governor, and I think the Democratic party would do itself a great injustice by nominating him; in fact, I think I know the Democratic party well enough to know that he will not be nominated, for the simple reason, if no other, that he is not eligible to hold the position, and if he should be nominated and elected, it would certainly mean a contest for the office, and the nerves of the Democratic body politic are not able to withstand another contest.

I will read the Constitution pertaining to the eligibility of Gov. Beckham, and submit the question to your cool and deliberate judgment, and desire to ask you after I have done so, if you do not think it would be exceedingly hazardous to nominate Gov. Beckham.

Here are the Sections of the Constitution pertaining to that subject:

Sec. 70—"He (the Governor) shall be elected for the term of four years by the qualified voters of the state."

Sec. 85—"Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of Governor, before the first two years of the term shall have expired, a new election for Governor shall take place to fill such vacancy."

Sec. 71—"He (the Governor) shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected."

If an intelligent combination of the three sections be made, it will read thus: "He (the Governor) shall be elected for the term of four years; but if a vacancy shall occur before the first two years of the term shall have expired, a new election shall take place to fill such vacancy, and he shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected."

If that is not a fair combination of the three sections for the purpose of getting at their true meaning when taken together, I confess that I cannot see why; and how any man can read it, and then conclude that Gov. Beckham is eligible, is a mystery to me.

I am not only thoroughly satisfied myself that he is ineligible, but I have secured the opinion of a number of Democratic lawyers, some of the best in the State on the point, and I will submit to you a carefully prepared opinion by them.

Hon. John K. Hendrick, Paducah, Ky.

Dear Sir:—In compliance with your request that we should investigate the question of Mr. Beckham's eligibility for re-election to the office of Governor after the expiration of his present term, permit us to say that we have given the matter most thoughtful and careful consideration, not only because of your request that we should investigate it and give you an honest opinion on the subject, but have also permitted our interest in the Democratic party and its future success to impel us to a most impartial and painstaking investigation; and we have deliberately come to the conclusion that Mr. Beckham will not be eligible to succeed himself.

Section 85 of the constitution concludes as follows: "Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of governor before the first two years of the term shall have expired, a new election shall take place, to fill such vacancy."

Section 71 of the constitution provides that "he (the governor) shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected."

It seems plain that the intention of the framers of the constitution was, that if the term to be served was long enough to require an election, then the governor so elected should be ineligible for the succeeding four years; and that is what the two sections, construed together, mean, and plainly say. The words "after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected," could have no other meaning. In other words, if the first two years of the term had expired, Mr. Beckham would have filled the unexpired term by succession, succeeding to it as lieutenant Governor, and no election could have been held; but if the first two years of the term had not expired, then an election was imperative, and the person receiving this honor at the hands of his people through an election would be ineligible for the succeeding four years; the spirit and intention of the provisions being that the person who had received the honors of one elective term should not take advantage of his patronage to force himself upon the people for a second elective term.

The framers of the constitution, beyond all doubt, desired to remove from the governor all temptation to distribute his patronage for a selfish purpose, or for the purpose of building up a machine to force the people to elect him a second time, after he had once been elected, when they might prefer some other person. It follows, therefore, that the term referred to in the sections means an elective term, and nothing else.

The question naturally arising in the mind of one reading section 71 is, has the term for which the governor was elected, expired? If it has, then is the person whose term has thus expired ineligible for the succeeding four years? The constitution itself, in section 71, answers the question when it emphatically declares that, after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected, he shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years. Let it be borne in mind that the framers of the constitution did not say, that after he has served a full term of four years he shall be ineligible for the succeeding term; but they did say emphatically that he should be ineligible after the term for which he was elected.

The framers of the instrument could not have used more explicit or emphatic terms. The elective franchise is a great and high privilege, and the constitution therefore provides that all elections shall be free and equal; and the framers of the constitution did not desire to place themselves in an attitude which would prevent their electing a person of the people's choice, instead of the one who might force himself upon them by a machine or other method.

Who does the constitution provide that when an individual has been elected governor for one term, he shall be ineligible for the position for the succeeding four years? It is plain that the object of the provision was to prevent the governor from so enthroning himself, through his power of patronage and other influences, that the people could not re-elect whom they pleased for the succeeding term. Hence, it is provided that "he shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected."

If any one of ordinary intelligence had been asked to interpret the meaning of that section as applied to Mr. Goebel immediately after his election, the unhesitating interpretation would have been, that simply meant that as Mr. Goebel had been elected by the people, he would be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the expiration of the term to which he had been elected. Any person with the slightest conception of the English language would at once fully approve of and endorse the interpretation; in fact, common sense and reason would revolt at any other interpretation—at any other meaning placed upon the section. If that meaning became so potent and powerful when applied to Mr. Goebel, because he had been elected by the people, why has it not the same application and same meaning when applied to Mr. Beckham, who has also been elected by the people? In other words, it is perfectly manifest, that if the vacancy to be filled is long enough to require an election under the constitution, the second person elected to fill the vacancy, would stand in the same attitude as the person first elected to fill the office. To put any other interpretation upon the two sections would do violence to the plain meaning of the words employed and at the same time would be a travesty upon the spirit and intention of those who drafted the instrument.

Let us reason about it a little further. If the first two years of the term have expired at the time the vacancy occurs, an election could not take place, and the person filling the unexpired term without an election would be eligible for the succeeding four years; because in that event he held the position by virtue of his former office, and the election appliances and machinery have not been resorted to for the purpose of conferring the office upon him; and for that reason, it was not essential to provide against something that could not arise under the constitution. But whenever the person has been elected, and has had an opportunity to go before the people and to form such alliances and combinations as may be necessary to elect him to the position one time, the framers of the constitution clearly intended that he should not perpetuate himself in office or power through his patronage and his capacity to build up a machine in politics, so to speak, in the State, and thus defy the will of the people.

It is childish to contend that the governor would be eligible to succeed himself if he filled a full elective term of four years, and eligible if the term covered only three years and eleven months, or three years, as the case might be. The constitution does not talk about full terms, or parts of terms, but it does refer to elective terms. This idea is clearly borne out by the case of Horton vs. Watson 23 Kan. 229; and likewise by the case of Davis vs. Patten, 41 Kan. 480. The provision of the constitution of Kansas construed by the two decisions referred to will be found in the following language: Article 9, Section 3.—"All county officers shall hold their offices for the term of two years, and until their successors shall be qualified, except county commissioners, who shall hold their offices for the term of three years; but no person shall hold the office of sheriff or county treasurer for more than two consecutive terms. The decision last referred to, supra, in part uses this language: "Now the defendant has served a part of the regular term ending in October, 1886, all of the term ending October, 1888, and is now attempting to hold the office for another term, which ends in October, 1890. If he is permitted to hold the office during the present term, he will have held consecutively two full terms and about six months of a third term. This would be a plain violation of the constitution. It is true that he had not served two full terms, or four years, at the expiration of the term which ended the second Tuesday of October, 1888, but to allow him to serve another term would extend his service beyond the constitutional limit. This subject was before the court in Horton vs. Watson, 23 Kan. 229, and a view directly contrary to that claimed by the defendant was expressed. In delivering the opinion Mr. Justice Valentine said: 'The constitution of course does not mean that the county treasurer may hold the office for four years; for if it did, then Watson might have held that office, not only during said intermediate space of time, but also for nearly nine months of said third term. The constitution said "two terms," not four years, and that the treasurer shall not hold the office "for more than two consecutive terms." Now, if he should hold the office for a part of one term and then for the whole of the next term, he could not be eligible to be elected for still another term; for that would give him the office for more than two consecutive terms.' That statement of the law exactly meets the claim made by the defendant in this case. He has held the office for a part of one term, the whole of the next, and therefore was not eligible to be elected for still another term."

It must be borne in mind that the Constitution of Kentucky does not say that the individual shall be ineligible after he shall have been elected for a term of four years, but simply provides that he shall be ineligible after the term for which he shall have been elected. So the question narrows itself down to this: Was he elected for a term? He was. Was it a full term? It was not. But the constitution does not say anything about a full term. It does say "after the expiration of the term for which he shall have been elected." Call it an unexpired term, if you please; if it was over two years, it was an elective term. Does the fact that it was an unexpired term change the meaning of the Constitution, which declares that he shall not be eligible after the term; whatever kind of a term it may be, for which he was elected? This, we think, emphasizes the idea that the constitution does not refer to a full term, or to an unexpired term, or to any other kind of term but an elective term; and that is the reason why the framers of the Constitution were so particular to incorporate into section 65 the provision that "if two years have not expired, a new election shall be held to fill the vacancy." As soon as the language received the seal of approval by the Constitutional Convention, it put at rest all talk about full terms and unexpired terms, and said unambiguously that, if an election should be held, the person thus elected should be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the term following such election."

"In view of this potent reasoning and these constitutional inhibitions, I believe Gov. Beckham to be too good a Democrat to become a candidate, and I believe he has the interests of the Democratic party too much at heart to jeopardize its welfare by permitting his name to be used, even by his enthusiastic and admiring friends.

In this connection, my friends, I desire to refer to the mode of making the nomination. I am not able at this time to say when a convention will be called; but I know that a convention will be called. The reason why I know that a convention will be called is, that there is no law to authorize the executive committee to call a primary election, and I know that that Committee, composed as it is of some of the best men in the State, will not want to violate their obligations to their party and to the people of the state, and assume a power which they do not possess, and which no intelligent man who will read the party law can claim that they ever did possess.

So far as I am personally concerned, I would gladly submit my claims to a primary election, if there were any law to authorize the calling of a primary election, or if I thought that a primary election could be held in justice and perfect fairness to all the candidates. The statute law of the state provides that the expenses of holding a primary election shall be paid by the political party holding the same. There is no provision in the law anywhere authorizing the Executive Committee, or any Committee, to tax men for the privilege of becoming candidates. I do not believe that it is good policy in a Republican form of government to say to men that they should pay a stipulated sum of money before they should have the privilege of running for office in the State of Kentucky.

We have inculcated into the minds of the young men of this country the idea that if they are honest and have made themselves competent, they may seek for the best positions within the gift of the people; but if a moneyed standard is to be made the criterion for the privilege of entering a race, it would at once exclude from the councils of the party some of the ablest young men in the state, because many of them have not the money to pay for the privilege of entering into a state campaign.

But that is not the only objection to it. We ought to go before the people in this campaign with a declaration of principles. We ought to declare our position on the tariff; we ought to declare our position on the trusts; we ought to declare our position on imperialism; we ought to declare our position on the ship subsidy bill, and many other important questions to be submitted to the people; and we cannot do that if we are to make the state nominations through a primary election, unless we hold a primary election and then afterwards meet and hold a convention too.

It has been said that Mr. Beckham has "fixed" the Executive Committee, by appointing quite a number of them to honorable and lucrative positions. I do not believe that the imputation is fair to the gentlemen composing that Committee. It is true that he has appointed quite a number of them to important and honorable positions; but I take it, from my knowledge of them, that they are not to be bought from their duty, if Gov. Beckham desired to purchase them by such means; but I do not even charge that he had any such intentions upon the Committee when he appointed them to office. But I do know, from the character of the men, that they are not going to betray their party, that they are not going to assume powers and prerogatives which they do not possess; that they are not going to risk the strife and bitterness that would be introduced into the party by the assumption by the committee of powers it never had; so that I say to you frankly that I know there will be no primary; but when or where the convention will be called to make the nominations for Governor and other state officers, I do not know."

as the language received the seal of approval by the Constitutional Convention, it put at rest all talk about full terms and unexpired terms, and said unambiguously that, if an election should be held, the person thus elected should be ineligible for the succeeding four years after the term following such election."

THE DRAKE OIL WELL.

It was the Forerunner of the Phenomenal Gushers in the Pennsylvania Fields.

One of the strongest, most important battles in the history of commerce was fought by Col. Edwin L. Drake, who, about 44 years ago, went to Titusville, Pa., a poor man, but a man with a scheme in mind which, although received with distrust by strangers, was perfectly lucid to him, and finally resulted in contributing to the wealth, power and happiness of the entire world.

The existence of petroleum, says the Four-Track News, had been known by all peoples since the time of Moses,

THE OLD DRAKE WELL.
(The Forerunner of Pennsylvania's Phenomenal "Gushers.")

but the task of drilling into the rocks, and compelling them to give up their treasures was left for the last half of the nineteenth century, and for an American. That pioneer well, on Watson's flats, with a production of 20 barrels a day for a year, was but the forerunner of the phenomenal "gushers" that were to come, and was the beginning of a wonderful industry and one unparalleled in the history of the past. Hitherto worthless lands brought fortunes to their owners; towns sprung up in a night; exchanges were instituted and men were in a frenzy to obtain their portion of the wealth which flowed from the deep confines of Mother Earth. Men such as Drake, those whose deeds benefit all future generations, are the ones whose likenesses "should be cast in deathless bronze," and whose names should be honored for all time to come.

ANIMALS CAN TALK.

Du Chaillu, the French Traveler and Explorer, Has Heard Them Laugh and Chat.

Paul B. du Chaillu, the explorer, says there is no doubt that animals talk in certain ways among themselves. In Africa he has heard gorillas laugh and guffaw when they came to rob a man's field and found that elephants had already destroyed everything, as if they appreciated the joke themselves. Again, he heard a gorilla, which had found some choice berries, calling another that was a long way off. He saw monkeys apparently deliberate for a long time before making some move. These animals, by the way, rarely drink water, but eat juicy berries and fruits instead.

PAUL B. DU CHAILLU.
(Famous French Explorer, Well Known in the United States.)

ries and fruits instead. Du Chaillu was impressed by the fact that even in a tropical forest animals have to work hard for a living. Some of them travel miles every day to get food, and have all kinds of trouble in finding a safe place to spend the night. Even elephants are very careful about their sleeping places. They hate snakes, and before lying down they carefully trample over a large area to kill or drive out reptiles and rodents. And big as they are they go in herds for greater safety.

Translator Was Staggered.

A Frenchman was engaged in translating an American novel and came to a description of a man "hitching his horse to a locust." This staggered the translator as he had never heard of the locust tree; but he was equal to the emergency and in explanation stated that "sauterelles" or grasshoppers grew to an immense size in the United States.

The Holy Ghost Plant.

The Holy Ghost plant, a product of Mexico, Central and South America, is so called because of the shape of the flower, which has the appearance of a dove with expanded wings.

The Latest in Incubators.

As a living incubator, John Fitson, a farmer of Eminence, Ky., holds the record. During a prolonged fit of sickness his wife placed 48 eggs in bed with him, and in due time 44 chickens emerged.

Mr. Ben La Bree's new book
"Notable Kentuckians at the begining of the Twentieth Century" is a most interesting volume printed in the very best style. It contains the portraits of nearly 1000 Kentuckians, with brief sketches representing nearly every branch of business and professions, trades and industries are given a place and every part of Kentucky is represented.
Mr. La Bree is the author of several other volumes, but this is one that will be greatly appreciated, not only at the present time, but in years to come.

The new constitution of Virginia is disfranchising all but about one

TWO GERMANS AND A DOG.

A Curious Case That Came Up in a Justice Court.

Two German laborers lived in cabins not far apart and between them there was a slight enmity which continued to grow, owing to the fact that Jake had a dog which made a practice of barking at Fritz every night as the latter was returning from work.
Fritz often remonstrated with Jake on the conduct of the dog and threatened to do harm to Jake's pet, but Jake only laughed at what appeared to him to be a first-rate joke. One night the dog was a little more aggressive than usual, and so it followed Fritz home, barking at his heels all the way.
This was more than Fritz could stand, so he got his gun and shot the dog. Jake was very angry and had his countryman arrested. Fritz was brought before a rural magistrate.

"Are you guilty or not?" asked the justice.

"Vell, I kilt der dog all right, but let Jake prove it," replied the prisoner.

The judge explained that he must plead guilty or not guilty, but Fritz, while admitting that he killed the dog, insisted that Jake must prove it.
The magistrate finally declared that the admission was equal to a plea of guilty and made it so. Turning to Jake, the court asked him what the dog was worth and what he wanted done with Fritz.

"Vell," said Jake, "to tell der truth der dog was not worth nothings, but seeing Fritz wanted to be so smart about it I demand that he pay me full value for it."

The court fined Fritz $10 and suspended the fine.—Chicago Daily News.

Hot Water Clock.

One of the most curious clocks in the world is perhaps that which tells the time to the inhabitants of a little American backwoods town, and which was constructed some time ago. The machinery, which is nothing, but a face, hands and lever, is connected with a geyser, which shoots out an immense column of hot water every 38 seconds. This spouting water never varies to the tenth of a second. Every time the water spouts up it strikes the lever and moves the hands forward 38 seconds.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon
disappear when the kidneys are out of order
or diseased.

Kidney trouble has
become so prevalent
that it is not uncommon
for a child to be born
afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urines too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy.
The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-
cent and one dollar
sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail
free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.
